THE INTERNATIONAL ENCYCLOPEDIA OF REVOLUTION AND PROTEST

1500 to the Present

A–BI | VOLUME I

WILEY-BLACKWELL

The International Encyclopedia of Revolution and Protest: 1500 to the Present is the first historical encyclopedia of its kind. Under the editorship of Immanuel Ness, and written by an international team of scholars, the Encyclopedia will be essential reading for students, researchers, and academics across the fields of social science.

This definitive 8-volume encyclopedia is a comprehensive print and electronic resource for the history of protest and revolution over the past 500 years and covers every major revolution that has altered societies or changed the course of history on a local, regional, national, and international scale.

Special features:

- Specially commissioned entries in A-Z format, from an internationally diverse editorial board and team of contributors
- Clear, concise explanations of events and large social movements, and biographies of key people – in entries ranging from 250 to 5000 words
- Online version with additional content, powerful searching, browsing, and cross-referencing capabilities, and annual updates
- Summaries of major uprisings and protest movements: the ideas, ideologies, and activists that propelled them; the manner in which they unfolded; their roots, goals, tactics, and influence; and their successes and failures

Immanuel Ness is Professor of Political Science at Brooklyn College, City University of New York, and the author of numerous works on resistance and social movements from a historical and comparative perspective, including Immigrants, Unions, and the US Labor Market (2005). He has received awards and acclaim for his reference works, including Encyclopedia of American Social Movements (2005), and Encyclopedia of Third Parties in America (1999). Ness is editor of the peer-review quarterly journal, Working USA: The Journal of Labor and Society (Wiley-Blackwell).
